The joint meetings of the inspection bodies are held periodically to ensure close cooperation between the experts of the inspection bodies, technical services and approved classification societies respectively, as well as developing common interpretations of technical requirements for inland navigation vessels. After the previous meetings in Budapest (2008), Wrocław (2012) and Vienna (2018), Croatia offered to host the next meeting under the auspices of CESNI from 26 to 28 September 2023 in Zagreb.

The representatives and experts of CESNI's Member States and observers, in particular the experts of the inspection bodies, international organisations and approved organisations are welcome to take part in this meeting.

Participation in the meeting is free of charge.

This meeting has three main objectives:

- 1. To inform the experts in the field about how CESNI works, as well as the main developments in the ES-TRIN (new elements of ES-TRIN 2023) and the international regulatory frameworks.
- 2. Exchange of experience between the experts of the Inspection bodies, technical services and approved classification societies, as well as representatives of the national authorities, on the application of the technical requirements.
- 3. Exchanges between the experts responsible for drafting the regulations and those responsible for applying them. This will be an opportunity to provide feedback on difficulties encountered in interpreting the technical requirements and propose interpretations in a coordinated manner.

Joint meeting of the inspection bodies

Chair: Ruben Lindemann, German delegation

Meeting sequence

After an introduction, the meeting will concentrate on examining questions raised and submitted by experts prior to the meeting concerning the specific application of the technical requirements. The working method will be to alternate between plenary discussions (with interpretation in 4 working languages) and progressing the various issues individually in a number of small groups (without interpretation). Every group will examine a different issue and will then present its results on the last day (pooling).
